

EDITORIAL

Welcome again to our international Conference!

In the history of psychiatry, our predecessors established classification systems in order to understand what in the brain function prevented the individual from creating relationships with others. The asylum had a function of refuge and hospitality where understanding psychiatric disorders helped in the development of treatments that supported social rehabilitation.

Many years later, psychiatric research continues to experience growing developments and we must remain more than ever vigilant that our classification system does not participate in the side-lining of the individual judged "abnormal" or in the creation of even more abnormalities in a world of constantly changing indicators.

Our convention this year, once again aims to support a varied and human vision of psychiatric research in its various fields and to encourage international meetings and discussions on our treatment and clinical analysis conditions.

International Conference on Mental Health 2016

9 > 11 September
Brussels

Denis Jacques, MD, MSc
Prof Nicolas Zdanowicz, MD, PhD

*Medicine Faculty, Université Catholique de Louvain
Psychopathology and Psychosomatic unit, Hospital University Center Mont-Godinne, Yvoir, Belgium*

with the collaboration of

