

Documents

Scrivener, M., Wittebole, X.

Noninvasive Ventilation in Immunosuppressed Patients, a Bad Idea? Really?*

(2024) Critical Care Medicine, 52 (11), pp. 1806-1809.

DOI: 10.1097/CCM.00000000000006430

Critical Care Department, Cliniques Universitaires St Luc, Brussels, Belgium

Author Keywords

immunosuppressed septic patients; noninvasive ventilation; outcome

Index Keywords

acute hypoxemic respiratory failure, acute lung injury, acute respiratory failure, adult respiratory distress syndrome, chronic obstructive lung disease, disease exacerbation, Editorial, endotracheal intubation, follow up, high flow nasal cannula therapy, hospital mortality, human, immunocompromised patient, lung edema, noninvasive ventilation, randomized controlled trial (topic), respiratory failure, sepsis, article, immunosuppressive treatment

Publisher: Lippincott Williams and Wilkins

ISSN: 00903493

CODEN: CCMDC

PubMed ID: 39418005

Language of Original Document: English

Abbreviated Source Title: Crit. Care Med.

2-s2.0-85206823979

Document Type: Editorial

Publication Stage: Final

Source: Scopus